PHOTO 2. The massive washover fans on Nauset Spit, Cape Cod, Massachusetts, were introduced by an intense "northeaster" on February 6th and 7th, 1978. These storm-generated deposits extend the barrier island surface landward into the lagoon. Beach facilities were largely destroyed by uprush on the northern end of the spit adjoining the glacial headland.